NEW YORK, NY – Information Management Network (IMN), a division of Euromoney/Institutional Investor, announces the seventh annual World Series of ETFs. The largest, longest running program in the ETF market segment will take place at the Four Seasons Hotel Miami on March 26-27, 2007.

Exchange-traded funds are among the fastest-growing segment of the financial product marketplace, and the World Series addresses all related topics. Financial planners, investment advisors, asset managers, hedge and pension fund managers, and exchange representatives will have the chance to discuss their ETF implementation strategies and the benefits for their clients. This event will allow perspectives from all sides and the chance to learn from the world's leading experts involved in developing and trading ETFs. "This conference not only provides the information to base current decisions upon, it also provides insight into what decisions will be made in the future as the market evolves," says Charles Boyer, executive director of the Gulfstream Goodwill Industries Foundation.

In addition to the educational opportunities, the World Series of ETFs provides a unique networking opportunity with "A Night at the Open," a reference to the Sony Ericsson Open, one of the leading international professional tennis tournaments. On March 26, a limited number of registrants will have the opportunity to go to the arena, enjoy dinner and visits by top tennis players, and watch the evening matches. This extraordinary opportunity will not last long.
